SUNSET CHRISTIANITY: MY EXPERIENCE TEACHING RELIGION IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA (PAPERBACK)

Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Framed as a memoir, Sunset Christianity offers a series of reflections on Christian post-secondary pedagogy in the 21st century. What do students bring to the university religion classroom? What experience, what knowledge, what attitudes toward religion and religious people? How can their resistance to the danger of any but the most namby-pamby sharing be overcome? How can their horror at the evils of religion in human culture, past and present, often the product of secularization theory, be assuaged? Using the insights of anthropologists and the sociologists who study lived religion, Forell Marshall draws on her extensive experience as a literary historian, hymn writer and poet. The combination of social science and poetry lets her focus on the signs and symbols all around us. She calls for us all (but especially teachers, pastors and parents) to learn to read these signs as packed with signification, as sacramental. Just so, ordinary experience at home, at work, in nature and at the shopping mall, all are to be understood as indicative of religious understanding—perhaps not the dogmatic understanding of conventional beliefs and creeds, but religious, even Christian, nonetheless. Such a reorientation insists on a new, localized theology that takes the world the students inhabit and the attitudes they bring to the religion classroom very seriously. What perhaps worked back east a couple of decades ago no longer works. Listening carefully, she finds students are traumatized and alienated by the angry disagreements (creation, gay marriage, political factionalism) that pass for religious concern. Students have likewise been deeply shaken by the almost universal association of religion with purity. When, for instance, abstinence only sex education is promoted in the name of Christianity, students have retained the association and...
